LINCOLN INTRODUCES NEW SLIDE-A-WAY PATIO DOOR!

Merrill, WI. (September 19, 2012) – Specifications for premium homes and light commercial spaces often call for incredibly large and distinguishing door systems. Lincoln's new Slide-A-Way system is an uncomplicated answer to this design requirement.

The Slide-A-Way door is available in configurations from one to ten panels. This is the ideal product for covering a span nearly 38 feet wide with the option to slide panels totally from one side and open fully in one direction, either left or right handed, or function as a bi-parting unit. Bi-parting doors have opposing panels meeting in the middle of the door utilizing an astragal at the connection point.

Designed as a pocketing door, panels neatly rest into a specially designed wall cavity providing a minimalist view of the door framing. A stacking door is a more traditional installation allowing all panels to reside over the last panel in the series.

Contemporary designers can increase glass area and lessen sash framing by choosing Lincoln's narrow stiles and rails, measuring 2-1/2". Opt for wide stiles and rails (measuring 4-7/8") when directing focus to an alternative wood species or to compliment swing doors that are in close proximity.

A thoughtful designer will approve of the closed doors' appearance where floor coverings run right up to the staggered tracks. Tracks are then hidden from sight. The flat sill creates relatively unobstructed access through an open door. Polypropylene rollers glide easily on the track-even on the largest door units.

Clients save time with Lincoln Patio Doors as they match their window package including: cladding and hardware colors, energy efficient glass, grilles and wood species.

Lincoln products are backed by a great warranty, built with care in the USA and serviced through your local dealer.
